TOYPURINA

A major new project celebrating our rich cultural history

CORPORATE, BUSINESS AND COMMUNITY SPONSOR OPPORTUNITIES

Following the outstanding success of the Re-Imagined Mission Play, the historic San Gabriel Mission Playhouse is delighted to announce a new project that celebrates the history of the area and the continuing contribution of our Native Peoples.

Written by two members of the Gabrieleno/Tongva San Gabriel Band of Mission Indians, and based on real-life events of their ancestors, Toypurina charts the life and times of the play's namesake, a young Native American woman who led a rebellion against injustice and oppression.

In 1785, at the young age of 25 and pregnant with her first child, Toypurina used her vision, charisma and determination to challenge the authority of the Spanish settlers. It was an action that would impact the rest of her life.

The Mission Playhouse will present this new production in July 2014 and we are happy to offer a range of opportunities for community sponsors to help bring the story of this remarkable young woman to the Los Angeles region.

As a sponsor, a variety of packages are offered for you to promote your business or non-profit which include featured exposure in our promotional materials, print and broadcast media and on-line advertising. We greatly appreciate your support for this wonderful new play!

Please contact Jennifer Atencio, Development Coordinator, to find out how you can be part of this significant cultural event.
